Halifax, NS B3J 2R8

Dear Minister Glavine,

Re: New progress report on the state of provincial and territorial child hearing health programs

We are writing on behalf of Speech-Language and Audiology Canada (SAC) and the Canadian Infant Hearing Task Force (CIHTF) to give you an advance copy of the CIHTF's new Early Hearing Detection and Intervention (EHDI) Progress Report and Position Statement, both of which will be officially released on January 18, 2016.

The new progress report is an interim status update on the EHDI Report Card, also included with this letter, which we published on March 25, 2014. While many provinces and territories continue to lack sufficient early hearing detection and intervention programs, we are pleased to see Nova Scotia's ongoing commitment towards improvement. In particular, we would like to commend your province for ensuring continued EHDI coverage in areas without major birthing centres.

While your province's EHDI program is more comprehensive than those in other regions, we encourage you to strive for excellence. It is imperative that Nova Scotia continues to invest in early hearing health programs to ensure that children throughout your province have access to timely screening and intervention services.

Overall, the progress report provides a rather disappointing picture of the state of EHDI programs in Canada. We have heard from audiologists and other professionals that ongoing funding restrictions, staffing issues and a lack of government commitment are standing in the way of universal access to early hearing health programs. This is troubling given that some experts have described permanent childhood hearing loss as a neurological emergency, and studies have shown that undiagnosed and untreated hearing loss can result in long-term linguistic, cognitive, academic, social and emotional difficulties.

The upcoming Conference of Federal-Provincial-Territorial Ministers of Health is an opportunity to start a national discussion about EHDI programs in Canada. We encourage you to share your lessons learned with your provincial and territorial counterparts so that they may benefit from Nova Scotia's progress, and to also consult with ministers from regions that have implemented strong EHDI programs, such as British Columbia.

The new federal government appears to welcome this type of increased pan-Canadian collaboration and knowledge sharing. As you are aware, Prime Minister Trudeau's mandate letter to Dr. Jane Philpott, Minister of Health, outlines the following as a top priority:

"...advance pan-Canadian collaboration on health innovation to encourage the adoption of new digital health technology to improve access, increase efficiency and improve outcomes for patients."

Once again, we would like to commend Nova Scotia for its ongoing investment in early hearing health. We hope you will take time at your meeting later this month to share insights on your EHDI program with the other ministers. It's time to make children's hearing health a national priority.

Sincerely,

Dr. Chantal Kealey, AuD, Aud(C)
