

Aphasia is a communication disorder that often results from stroke.

People with aphasia know more than they can say.

Aphasia can be isolating. It may affect:

- Speaking
- Understanding words
- Reading
- Writing

Over 100,000
Canadians live with aphasia

Speech-language pathologists help people with aphasia connect with others and participate in everyday life.

To learn more, please visit www.sac-oac.ca

Speech-Language &
Audiology Canada
Communicating care

